

Lannion / Perros-Guirec

La Vélo maritime / EuroVelo 4

You leave the historic town of Lannion via its Brélévenez Quarter, looking down on the centre. You then cycle on through an iconic section of the Vélo maritime route - the Côte de Granit Rose, famed for its highly colourful rocks sculpted into extraordinary shapes by the elements, plus with the national nature reserve of Les Sept-Îles out to sea. Do take the link to extraordinary Ploumanac'h, making the most of stops beside remarkable sandy creeks along the way.

The route

Mainly along minor roads, with some stretches on rural greenways with sandy surfaces that are easy to ride along.

Take care:

- after Lannion, on the Serval road, where traffic can be busy and fast
- crossing the RD21 road north of Trébeurden
- on the steep slope at the end of the stage, to be tackled with caution, in part as there's a Stop sign during the descent, before you arrive at the RD6 road

Link: from Perros-Guirec, a signposted link scarcely 3km in length to Ploumanac'h, a resort that epitomizes the extraordinary Côte de Granit Rose
